It had been arranged to have the wedding take place on October 3, but owing to the fact that the bridegroom is a member of the Seventh Regiment of the National Guard of New York, which has been ordered out, the date was advanced.

The ceremony took place yesterday morning at 11 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents in the Ontario in the presence of both families and a few close friends. The Rev. U. G. B. Pierce officiated and the Rev. Dr. Bralson pronounced the benediction. The apartment was charmingly decorated with pink rambler roses and honeysuckle against a background of palms. Miss Mary Push furnished the wedding music.

The bride wore a becoming gown of blue georgette crepe beaded in white with a white hat and a corsage bouquet of orchids and lilies of the valley. She was attended by Miss Helen Dodge and Miss Ruth Weeks, sister of the bridegroom. Little Miss Frances Dawson, cousin of the bride, served as flower girl.

The apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Clay Surgy in the Ironclads was the scene of a charming wedding last evening when their daughter, Miss Eugenie Marie Surgy, became the bride of Mr. Blair M. Bennett, of Pittsburgh. The ceremony was performed at 7 o'clock by the Rev. Edward L. Buckley, in the presence of the immediate families and was followed by a large reception from 8 to 10. Pink and white roses and a variety of other summer flowers formed the decorations.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, was gowned in white bridal satin trimmed with chantilly lace. Her tulle veil was arranged under a cap of Glangary lace and her bouquet was of white roses. The bride's train was of white satin and carried a bouquet of Killarney roses.

Mr. William Searight acted as best man.

At the reception the bride's mother assisted the young couple in receiving. She was becomingly gowned in lavender satin veiled in French grey chiffon.

Mr. Bennett and his bride left later for a wedding trip, the latter traveling in a motor car with a blue and white color scheme.

Upon their return they will reside at the Ironclads, where they have leased an apartment for the summer.

Almond Green Taffeta and Chiffon

Unusual in design is the dress of almond green taffeta, edged with narrow ruching running vertically over the front of the skirt and bodice. In bolero effect, with a round shaped decolletage, the waist is edged with narrow frills, the high choker collar, the bulging sleeves of chiffon, with bands of satin to match the belt, are all details worth noting. The skirt, which is not very full, has set-on long scallops.

THE DAILY ADVENTURES OF PUSS IN BOOTS, Jr.

The Prince Regains His Kingdom.
By DAVID CORY.

Now that Puss Junior had found the king's son and brought him to the castle of the little white cat, his duties were almost ended. That is, the chief object of this adventure of his had been fulfilled. The little white cat had regained her natural form, the spell under which she had been living had now been dispelled and she had once more become a lovely princess.

The only thing left was for Puss to see that the king's son found the most beautiful dog in the world. Having found this, the king's son could return to his own kingdom and claim the throne which his royal father had promised to give to the one who would bring home the most beautiful dog in the world.

Puss Junior went up to the little white cat and, kneeling, spoke to her. "Princess, for I had not seen you for so long, I would like to see you again. I would like to see you in your lovely former self," he said. "My lady, I would like to see you in your former self, but I am afraid I cannot do so. I am afraid I cannot do so, for I am afraid I cannot do so."

"What will I gladly do," she replied, "and turning to the prince, she said, with a blush, 'My lord, you shall be rewarded for your deliverance of the little white cat. See, I present you with my favorite greyhound.'

Great was the joy of the king's son. For he knew that neither of his two brothers would ever be able to find another animal so handsome as this. Turning to the princess, he made a low bow and said, 'Will you not go with me to my father, for I would also show him the most beautiful woman in the world?'

At this the princess blushed yet more deeply, but she replied nevertheless that she would gladly go with him. In a short time they all went out and toward midnight arrived at the palace of the king. The king's youngest son, and the lovely princess, as well as Puss in Boots, Junior, alighted and ran up the steps. Inside the castle all was in a great commotion. The other two brothers had arrived with hundreds of dogs for the king to choose from, all of whom were howling and making such a noise that presently the king got off his throne and ran half-dressed out into the hall. At the same moment, in came his youngest son with his two companions. I should say three, for the beautiful greyhound followed closely at the heels of the lovely princess. When the king beheld her, with the wonderful dog by her side, he cried: 'Son you have brought me the most beautiful dog! Would that you had brought this lovely lady for your bride.'

"Sir," replied the younger son, "I care nothing now for the kingdom, for this lovely lady has promised to be my wife."

"Zounds!" exclaimed the king, "you certainly are a lucky dog! At which all the courtiers laughed, and the lovely lady blushed. When the king perceived that he had made a joke, he also laughed loud and long. Then the beautiful princess said:

"Your majesty, your son has done me a great favor. Now, as I have three kingdoms of my own, he shall have two and I will keep one; you, therefore, will not be deprived of yours. Only this I ask, will you not allow me to take back my dog? I am so fond of him."

"That I will," replied the king, "for in losing the dog I regain my kingdom, which is not a bad bargain."

So the king's youngest son and the lovely princess were married that night, and the next morning Puss bade them goodbye.
